Where Accountability Breaks Down

Most gaps aren't dramatic. They're quiet, and they compound.

- ☐ Decisions made in meetings are written down somewhere everyone can find.
 - ☐ Every open commitment has one clearly named owner.
 - ☐ I know what happens when a deadline is missed — and so does everyone else.
 - ☐ Feedback moves in both directions, not just downward.
 - ☐ I can name who is accountable to me, and who I'm accountable to.
 - ☐ Nothing important currently depends only on my memory.
 - ☐ Follow-through is checked on a schedule, not just when something breaks.
 - ☐ I've had an honest conversation about accountability in the last 90 days.
